New Heads at Normanhurst, Coopersale Hall and Oaklands Schools

Through a combination of retirement and relocation, The Oak-Tree Group of Schools have recruited three new excellent Headmistresses in the last academic year

Claire Osborn returned to Normanhurst School in North Chingford last September having spent until 2008 as Assistant Head before taking up a Deputy Headship in Mill Hill. "I have thoroughly enjoyed returning to Normanhurst as Headmistress this year. We're getting lots of new enquiries for places and I seem to be constantly showing lots of parents and children around, which is a very fulfilling side to this role. We're increasingly popular with pupils living in the North Chingford area, with many children walking to school or travelling independently by bus. This is a warm and friendly local school with very high expectations for excellent academic achievement."

Kaye Lovejoy, who joined Epping's Coopersale Hall School in January 2011, has had the additional challenge of a rigorous inspection visit by the Independent Schools Inspectorate in her first two terms. A team of four Independent Schools Inspectors spent much time scrutinising all aspects of the School's education, which concluded with an excellent report crammed full of superlatives. Kaye says, "I am very proud of the inspection report, which reflects exceptionally well on the behaviour and educational standards of the children, the dedication and professionalism of the staff and the support and encouragement of the parents at Coopersale Hall."

Cheryl Macnair will take over as Headmistress at Oaklands School in Loughton from September following the retirement of Pam Simmonds. She has been Deputy Head at Oaklands since 2005, so is very aware of the outstanding traditions and education that were identified by the Independent Schools

Inspectorate during their routine inspection in November. Cheryl says, "I am very grateful to Pam for her support and encouragement, and am looking forward to driving the school forward to the next stage in its development." Oaklands enters its 75th anniversary year in January, with a large celebratory garden party for ex and current pupils, staff and families planned in July 2012.
