

Claire Osborn

Headmistress

Normanhurst School

Claire Osborn became Headmistress of Normanhurst School, North Chingford's longest established independent private school, in 2010. The school celebrates its 90th Anniversary in 2013 ; it has changed remarkably over the years: from being a girls' prep school, to becoming co-ed and then expanding to include seniors and even boarders at one time in its history.

"Now we are known as a high-achieving, academically successful school with a growing reputation for excellence. We are becoming increasingly popular, as the surge of interest at our recent open days showed. We are year-on-year one of the top performing schools at GCSE in the London Borough of Waltham Forest. We educate children from 2 ½ to 16 years; with many pupils staying with us up to their GCSE examinations.

We have remarkable success in the creative arts at regional and national level and our values-driven ethos means that pupils 'expect to exceed' – to become better than they thought they could be and to achieve more than they thought they could achieve.

Our small classes, personalised style and the excellent team of staff are instrumental in our success. We achieve our aim that all pupils should flourish here at Normanhurst, academically and in character, as our recent school inspection shows.

We are proud to be a family school, shaped by its values that each and every pupil can make a difference and contribute to our school community." As well as being Headmistress, Claire also chairs the Independent Schools Association London North area and is an ISI school inspector.
